

LUNCH BOX JOKES

www.backtobeingawoman.com

Q: Why did the fisherman put peanut butter in the ocean?    A: To go with the jelly-fish.

Q: Why are teddy bears never hungry?                            A: They are stuffed.

Q: What do librarians fish with?                                    A: Bookworms.

Q: What do you call an alligator in a vest?                        A: An investigator!

Q: What do you call a flying skunk?                                 A: A smellycopter.

Q: What did one pencil say to the other?                         A: Man... you're looking sharp!

Q: Why are ghosts bad liars?                                        A: You can see right through them?

Q: What do elves learn in school?                                 A: The elfabet!

Q: How do bees get to school?                                        A: On a school buzz.

Q: What do you get when you mix pants and a dictionary?    A: A smarty pants.

Q: What can you serve but never eat?                             A: A volleyball.

Q: Why did the clock in the cafeteria run slow?                A: It always went back for seconds.

Q: What fruit do you serve to a scarecrow?                      A: Straw-berries.

Q: Why did the donut go to the dentist?                         A: To get a chocolate filling.

Q: Why'd the boy throw the butter out the window?    A: To see a butterfly.

Q: Why did the computer squeak?                                 A: Someone stepped on the mouse.

Q: Why did the boy bring his dad to school?                    A: To take a Pop quiz.

Q: What did the pork chop say to the steak?                    A: Nice to meat you.

Q: What's worse than finding a worm in your apple?    A: Half a worm in your apple.

Q: What do you call two banana peels?                            A: Slippers.

Q: How do you fix a cracked pumpkin?                            A: With a pumpkin patch.

Cut jokes apart into strips & add one a day to lunchboxes! I fold mine in half to separate the joke from the punchline.